Surprise!

Couple ecstatic over birth of son

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Cherie Schadler and her husband, Ron, were in for the surprise of their lives as they settled in for the evening Wednesday at home

She didn't feel well, and stayed up. He went on to bed.
"I thought something horrible was happening, but I didn't know what," Cherie recalled Friday.

Time and time again, she treked to the bathroom. Finally, in excruciating pain, she stretched out in the bathtub. There was an Joseph Francis weighed in at eight pounds, 14 ounces, and the Schadlers are thanking God for the entire, bizzare story.

"I didn't know I was pregnant ... It didn't occur to me," says Cherie from her bed at Hancock Medical Center before her release Friday. During her interview, Ron was on the telephone, hastily making arrangements for his wife and new son's return to home.

But how could such a thing happen? There were some symptoms Cherie's now able to recognize in retrospect. But not in time to have any idea what was happening until her baby's head popped forth and Ron asked if she might be pregnant.

He said, 'Babe, it's the head, the head. It's a baby'!" Cherie says she was hysterical with joy, as she stayed stretched out in the bathtub, screaming, "I just had a baby." Ron dashed to the phone to summon medical help, and to call the new, unsuspect-

Printing problems hold up fishing licenses

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

Fishermen in the state and locally will be able to fish without fear this holiday weekend because the Bureau of Marine Resources is saying, "go fishing on us!"

The BMR had a problem with getting their licenses printed and are also still working on their computer program, therefore licenses are not available for fishermen yet.

"The people can just enjoy their holiday weekend and not worry about getting a ticket, because there are none available yet for them to purchase. Our conservation officers are aware of the problem and are not issuing tickets," head of the license department, at. BMR, Pam McDonald, said.

The licenses should be ready and to dealers by the mid-July.

Supervisors discuss funding for covered arena facilities

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

The much wanted and needed covered arena is coming along slowly, but surely, as the Hancock County Board of Supervisors met in a workshop yesterday with a representative of Jim "Buck" Ross' office to discuss funding for the project. Glen Hamilton said that there could be funding on the federal level in either the form of a low interest loan or grant for the county.

He added that the project would qualify because of the type of project planned and the amount of population where the project is planned to be built. Representatives of local thoroughbred associations and quarter horse associations were present and voiced the need for more than just a covered arena. They also said that a training facility and barns were needed that the county could charge for the use of and have revenue from.

"I really believe that this type of facility will pay for itself in no time at all. We need to do this for the children of the area and we also need to give local trainers and horse owners a place to safely exercise and train their animals,

Chancery Clerk Michael Necaise said. Hamilton told the supervisors that if placed in Bay St. Louis, the project would qualify for a loan with an approximate five percent interest rate and that the payments could be deferred for the first two to three years if there was need to do

The supervisors appointed District Three supervisor Howard Lizana to chair a commission and for the various organizations to select a representative to find a location and try to determine what the cost would be along with what is exactly needed in the project.

If the 21 mountainous space projectiles penetrate deeply enough into Jupiter's surface gases, the resulting explosions will be on the order of about 1 million megatons apiece. Compare that to the all-time 58-megaton Soviet boom of 1961.

While the 420 million miles between Jupiter and us may be comforting, they have nothing to do with a troubling question:

Could such a fleet of space projectiles hit the earth?

Intriguingly, that question was answered long ago. Witness 4/5-mile-wide Meteor Crater in Arizona and 2-mile-wide New Quebec Crater, both gouged out by huge meteorites.
These pale before the 26-mile-wide crater in Africa which, scientists figure, was quarried by a nuclear-type explosion triggered by a meteorite the size of the Titantic.

As in the case of Jupiter, we can be hit by something far larger than the Titanic, and we may be struck by metallic and/ or rock compounds far denser and deadlier than mere ice.

All this serves only to confirm the advice of the Master: "Do not worry about tomorrow. Tomorrow will take care of itself. Sufficient for a day is its own evil" (Mt. 6:34).

Although that help had trouble finding the remote Schadler dwelling, soon two paramedics and four firemen were in the bathroom of the small house, preparing her and the baby for a trip to the hospital. Cherie said her mother threatened to faint, as Cherie and son were wheeled out the doorway.

Still childless at age 36, Cherie said she and her husband had planned to begin adoption proceedings next year - she'd been told by physicians she was incapable of having children. Cherie said irregular mer-strual periods are common on her side of the family.

A small woman, Cherie says she had developed only a slight pouchy" appearance toward the end of her pregnancy -- some people had noticed that, she said, but Cherie thought nothing of it.

When she started feeling bad on Wednesday, she attributed her pains to menstrual cramps. A few hours later, she thought she had begun a period unexpectedly -- doctors now say her water had burst. "I felt like my insides were going to come out," she recalls. The birth was recorded officially at 1:33 a.m. June 30.

At the hospital, Cherie and baby were found to be in fine shape, although Joseph developed a problem several hours later that led to his air evacuation to Ochsner's Hospital in New Orleans. In exploratory surgery, the physicians found a small section of twisted bowel and corrected the condition. He's expected to join Cherie and Ron at home in a few days.

Deeply religious, Cherie and Ron say God presented them with a healthy, full-term baby and pulled the couple and infant through several potentially disastrous situations. "This is such a special blessing God gave to us," she says. "Through this situation, again and again and again, God showed us that we just have to trust Him." Meanwhile, family and friends have rallied to help the Schadlers prepare for parenthood, donating baby supplies and clothes.

They are financially unprepared, and their little house isn't totally finished on the inside. In addition, they haven't geared up on the parenting skills they'll need. But the Schadlers are on top of the

With two years' organizing to oppose Spectrum -- or any casino -- at Henderson Point, the Concerned Citizens to Protect the Point and the Isles turned out in droves for the meeting anyway.

Commission Executive Director Paul Harvey said opponents had waged an "unprecedented" letter-writing campaign to kill the casino's chances of locating just south of the Bay St. Louis bridge. The point, he said, the commission had to hire two temporary workers to deal with it.

"Y'all sure know the value of a stamp," Harvey quipped to the standing-room-only audience at Treasure Bay Hotel in Biloxi.

Harvey and other commission staffers are on record saying the Spectrum site most probably is a "legal" location, under state law governing placement of gaming

But, he said he would have "grave trouble" ever recommending that the casino receive a license to operate at that site, considering a number of factors, including its proximity to a major religious activity.

Harvey noted the substantial opposition to it -- including the Harrison County Board of

All citizens of the City of Bay St. Louis should be very proud of the city being recognized as one of three in the state to receive a Liveable Community Award at the recent Mississippi Municipal Association's convention in Biloxi.

In a short few years, Bay St. Louis is a 'changed' city. Good things are happening in all areas of the 100-yearold plus community.

The city's leaders, along with residents, have a much changed positive attitude.

Streets are being resurfaced and repaired, sidewalks are being installed and others repaired, road shoulders and ditches mowed on a regular schedule, and highway median grass being maintained in a park-like condition, along with beautiful flower beds.

On the economic, or business side, new businesses are opening, some are remodeling, while others are expanding. Old buildings are being renovated and businessmen and women have a positive outlook for the

Congratulations are in order for Mayor Eddie Favre and the Bay St. Louis City Council along with every citizen of a city that has 'come to life.'

A 'we attitude' helps make all of these things a reality, and all of 'we' should compliment ourselves upon receiving a prestigious award.

It seems this is going to be one of those long hot

I do not think it can get any hotter here then it has been already this year.

Air conditioners in businesses and homes are being overworked, while power company officials are smiling all the way to the bank. I can think of those days we depended only on small fans for cooling.

High temperatures did not seem to bother me as much as it does today.

We usually talk about the 'dog days,' or hot days of August, I am hoping temperatures will be dropping by August rather than rising.

Don't forget the Annual Our Lady of the Gulf Crab Festival continues today and tomorrow starting at 11

The festival offers all types of seafoods, dinners and St. Rose DeLima Catholic Church's Fair also continues today on Necaise Avenue in Bay St. Louis, They, too, offer all types of foods and games.

Live entertainment is on tap at the festival and fair. Diamondhead will brighten up tomorrow with their annual July 4th parade at 10 a.m. The Annual Mississippi Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo headquartered at Rice Pavillion in Gulfport continues through Monday too. A lot of activities are out there for one to enjoy. I hope you have a very safe July 4th holiday.

I received a telephone call from a county resident on Wednesday complaining that he received a summons for jury duty and could not serve. The resident reported he had to use a cane to walk with and was unable to use stairs. He indicated he would really enjoy serving on a jury if selected, as it would give him something to do. The courthouse does not have an elevator, so a person unable to go up stairs is unable to reach the courtroom. Hopefully one day the problem will be solved, as there is a study now being made on courthouse needs for Hancock County.

Senator Thad Cochran announced the Senate Governmental Affairs Commitee approved the Unfunded Mandates Bill.

Cochran, a member of the committee, voted in favor of the legislation, which will discourage Congress from shifting the cost of expensive, new federal programs to state and local governments. "The practice of shifting costs of government programs from Washington to the states and localities will stop if this bill becomes law. It is long overdue," Cochran said.

CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

Welfare reform needs attention, says Taylor

When the president offered his welfare reform proposal, congressional liberals blasted the plan for being too harsh. Conservatives argued the plan didn't go far enough toward discouraging such things as illegitimate births and welfare dependence. Whether too harsh or too lenient, welfare reform has finally made it to one of the nation's front burners.

The president's plan complements a number of welfare reform bills already before Congress. After much anticipated give and take, I am hopeful Congress can get a compromise bill to the floor by the end of the

I would suspect that most Americans would agree that our country is in dire need of a welfare reform plan. Since welfare's inception under the Emergency Relief Act of 1933, the cost of welfare has remained fairly constant. However, around 1978 welfare spending jumped significantly. Today, welfare spending is more than $50 billion a year.

It is unfortunate that most welfare recipients have little education or job experience. But I firmly believe the current system discourages recipients from furthering their education or getting additional work experience.

The present system certainly doesn't encourage recipients to take a job. A highly touted proposal, however, would require recipients to either attend school or undergo job training.

If a recipient doesn't get a job in two years, I believe it is not only the government's right but its responsibility to withhold or reduce government benefits to that individual.

Many have argued that wel-fare recipients lack proper child care and training to successfully obtain a job that will push them out of poverty.

Whatever welfare plan comes out of Congress, it will most likely answer that argument with a transition program that will focus on child care and job training.

One of my main concerns with the president's plan, however, is that the transition program would increase welfare spending $2.8 billion over five years for more education, training and job placement assistance.

In light of recent spending cuts, especially those targeted toward defense, I would find it very difficult to increase the already burgeoning welfare budget. I don't see any reason why we can't work within the parameters of last year's welfare spending levels.

We all can agree that most people on public assistance have real needs and are, in some cases, the victims of unfavorable circumstances.

When welfare is reformed, it must be done in a manner that protects those truly in need, but is also fair to the working taxpayers and encourages selfsufficiency.

If we can meet these criteria, it doesn't make any difference whether the plan is labeled too harsh by liberals or too lenient by conservatives. If it helps the poor pull themselves out of poverty without increased spending, then I say our country

Fairy tale:

S3120 stops government growth

There were a few red faces around the table during a recenmeeting of the Joint Legislative Budget Committee. A few of the 10 members shifted uncomfortably in their chairs during the report of the director of the State Personnel Board. Senate Bill 3120 wasn't Budget Committee members were not amused.

Composed of the Lieutenant Governor, House Speaker and chairs of the respective taxwriting and apopropriation committees, the group sets the legislative spending agenda. In 1992 the Legislature over-rode Governor Kirk Fordice's veto of Senate Bill 3120, raising the state sales tax from six cents to seven. Another portion of the bill required state agencies to reduce the number of state jobs by 10 percent over the next five years. Legislators since 1992 have emphasized the action they took in Senate Bill 3120 to halt government growth. Critics at the time pointed out that Senate Bill 2120 was flawed because the reductions would be made in job positions that were unfilled.

Now, two years into the fiveyear period cited in Senate Bill 3120, Budget Committee members heard that there are more employees in state government today than in 1992. And figures cited to members did not include employees involved in higher education.

The Mississippi Employment Security Commission reports that more than 3,700 have been added to the state payroll, including higher education, from May 1992 to May 1994, almost a 7 percent increase. One final note about government growth. The same 1992 legislative session that passed Senate Bill 3120 authorized a total of $5.7 billion in state spending. This past session authorized more than $7 billion in state spending.

The USM department, which was granted more than $730,000 for the project, administers the 10-state Southwest

"This project originally was pushed by Congress to assist middle school educators (grades 5-8) in building resilience in children from homes with an alcoholic parent," said Amy Sevier, director of USM's Department of Drug Education and Prevention.

The USM department has produced newsletters, two videotapes and an activity kit for trained teachers throughout the 10-state region with a staff ranging from four to 13 people during the program.

Also a national teleconference, "Classroom Connections: Building Resilience in Children of Alcoholics," was produced and broadcasted. The program was available via satellite to schools across the country and is available on videotape.

Training 18,000 middleschool teachers in the Southwest Region took a lot of planning, Sevier said.

After the original training of 37 educators in 1992, that group went out to the 10-state region and trained a second generation of educators.

This process, called "training-of-trainers," has completed training of 18,000 educators in two years. The program teaches educators activities that can be conducted in their classrooms to help children of alcoholic parents. The primary way of doing this is by developing resilience skills in children, Sevier

"Children who live in homes with an alcoholic parent typically utilize more resilience skills," Sevier noted, adding that resilience skills include making appropriate decisions, learning to refuse, being creative and imitating a role model. A big part of the project is the Connections Kit, which is the activity kit developed by the U.S. Department of Education. Training seminars have focused on the application of the Connections Kit to a teacher's individual classroom.

"Most of the emphasis on building resilience has to do with building skills that will help students in all facets of their lives," Sevier said. "Part of the beauty of the project is that we're able to tune in to anybody because the skills are so applicable,"

The USM department also has developed another videotape to help prepare teachers for the Connections Kit

HOME DOWN

By Darlene Underwood Hancock County Home Economist

When your child is home alone

It's summer time, and many of our children in Hancock County are at home alone or with younger brothers and sisters. This is not a unique situation. Research indicates that 18% to 26% of school-aged children stay at home alone for part of each week day.

In numbers, that means in Mississippi 164,000-237,000 children are latchkey. In Hancock County that's 1,500 to 2,000 children in self-care. You never know when a minor emergency may occur. A car hits a utility pole and the lights or telephone go out, knees and elbows get scraped, or the smoke detector starts to ring from a piece of burned toast.

When children are home alone, it's a good idea to follow the Girl Scout motto and "be prepared" for minor emergencies before they occur.

Get a large zip-top plastic bag. Have your child help you fill it with things needed in an emergency: a flashlight with batteries that work; band aids; cotton balls; mild antiseptic; several quarters, safety pins; telephone numbers of relatives, neighbors, friends and your work number.

Discuss each item with your child as you pack the bag. Have your child decide which phone number she would call first, second and so on. Put the bag in a place that is easy to find.

Being prepared for minor emergencies helps both the child and parents feel safer when a child is home alone.

If you would like more information on self-care for children the Extension Service has a free brochure. Call 467-5456 and request publication 1487.

WORLD

By Jimmie Brewer

Good morning, my dearly beloved, sun-scorched Southerners. Pour another shot of 2 percent milk over your cornflakes and sit down for a spell.

I don't know when, where or how it started, but I suddenly realized I'm old and scared of most anything bigger than a bread box.

I think I realized I was getting old the other day when my kids alertly pointed out that I was 245 years old in canine years. Of course, I do live in an area (Diamondhead) where the collective median age is 245 in HUMAN years.

The fact of the matter is that lately I've been scared into being old. I'm scared of tools, machinery, vehicles, electricity, driving, and no-neck dudes named Guido.

The other day I'm cruising through Houston, Texas on my way home from San Antonio, toting the "gruesome twosome" (my kids). Suddenly I find myself on a 173-lane highway filled to the brim with cars and trucks.

ic piloting a rusty "old beater" complete with bald tires, while Hey folks, it wouldn't have dining on one of those been so bad if all those vehicles quadruple-decker cheeseburwere standing still, but they gers. What a picture of beauty weren't. They were acting as if had almost chewed my tongue off, my beard had turned white and my children had reached their 21st birthday.

Machinery is another thing that scares the heebie-jeebies out of me. I mean, lately I get a little nervous just operating an electric can opener.

The other day, and only as a last resort, I was forced into helping our pressman, Jim, run our printing press.

For those of you who have never seen a printing press, it's roughly the same size as the USS Eisenhower. It has all kinds of limb-removing parts.

It has cutters, folders, grinders, pinchers, chains and an assortment of gadgets designed to chew you up at any given moment.

My job on that day was to catch papers as they emerged from the monster and stack them neatly on a cart. Sounds easy, right? WRONG.

It's kinda like standing in the

For one solid hour I did that. I perspired from parts of my body that I thought were incapable of perspiring. I figure I worked more in that one hour than I have in the last six years. Well folks, it's another holiday on the Gulf Coast. If you people can't find something to do around here, you have a serious problem. There are tons of fun-stuff happening this weekend, so turn off that tube and get moving.

Praise for do-gooders this week goes out to all you law enforcement dudes who try to keep the lunatics off the streets.

Keep it up, Okay, folks, it's your show. Have fun! Send comments to:

4th of July

lays and outdoor activis are synonymous with fun. The two go together like a kid and water on a hot summer day.

This Fourth of July holiday, the Corps of Engineers wants to remind you to take it easy around the water, especially with children.

Children can quickly get too much sun, unless you use plenty of sun screen and take shade breaks," said Dave Dutton, Sardis Lake ranger in northern Mississippi.

"Also, on these hot summer days, be sure everyone drinks plenty of fluids."

Beaches are one of the best places to have swimming fun and one of the most dangerous places without a few common sense activities.

If your children are swimming, floaties (on the upper arms) are better than nothing, but most water safety experts prefer life jackets to keep little ones afloat.

Another safety tip is be sure your child swims in his/her life jacket to get used to it in case the youngster gets thrown overboard when boating.

"Regardless of whether a child can swim or not, or what a child is wearing or playing with, parents must always keep an eye on their children around the water," Dutton said. "All it takes is about 10 seconds for a drowning to occur."

simply get a muscle cramp and get into trouble in a hurry. Inflatable toys give children a false sense of security, allowing the child to float into deeper water. If the toy springs a leak or turns over, the child should be in trouble.

"A drowning victim can't yell for help because they are busy trying to breathe," said Dutton.
"Often a drowning person looks like someone splashing up and down in the water is if playing."

Many Corps beaches have rescue equipment on shore. For instance, at Sardis Lake, the beach usually has a reach pole and a throw bag/rescue rope.

"We try to keep them available, but sometimes vandals steal or damage them," Dutton said. "We have them on the beaches so you can reach the notential victim without getting close to him or her."

The motto, "throw—don't go," is the bottom line on water rescues. Push a pole or air mattress to the victim or throw a rope or towel and pull the victim to safety, just don't get close enough to them to get caught yourself.

"A drowning person will put a strangle hold onto anything closeby, including people," Dutton said. "That is why so many would-be rescuers also drown."

According to Dutton, these basic water safety ideas also apply to older swimmers. If you Even good swimmers can swim with a buddy, you will slip, get hit by others or just have someone to pull you out of the water in case you get into trouble.

Swimmers should also remember that buoys are in place to keep boat traffic out of the swimming area. Buoys are not toys to sit on, and they are not lap markers.

Another way for adults to help avoid trouble on the water is to remember that alcohol and water don't mix. The combined effects of sun, wind, waves and water compound the effects of alcohol.

However, most importantly, under the influence of alcohol, one's coordination and good judgement become impaired.

Swimmers should also keep an eye on the weather. At most Corps facilities, rangers make every effort to warn beach goers of impending bad weather.

"But, because summer storms blow up quickly, we can't always get to the beach before the storm arrives," Dutton said. "For that reason, we ask people to use good weather sense. People on the beach or in boats are excellent targets for lightening."

So, when a storm approaches, please leave the beach area or water, whether or not a ranger officially closes the beach,

Also when you are on the beach and a ranger approaches, remember that he is only there for your safety. This July 4 weekend, help our rangers have a drowning-free holiday!

MHP plans lifesaver details for Fourth of July weekend

Col. Jay Clark, Mississippi Highway Patrol director, said that the Lifesaver details are having such a positive impact on traffic safety, they will be set up during the Fourth of July weekend.

"The goal of Lifesaver is to reduce deaths resulting from motor vehicle crashes on state and federal highways," Clark

"If ticketing speeders and arresting drivers under the influence of drugs or alcohol is what it takes, we will oblige," Clark said.

When the first Lifesaver detail was held April 1, a 46 percent increase in fatalities had been recorded on state and federal highways between Jan 1. and March 341, 1993 compared to the same three-months period in 1993. That figure has dropped to a six percent

He said Mississippi's program has been so impressive, the Tennessee Highway Patrol has asked his agency to assist them in a joint roadblock on the Tennessee-Mississippi line on Six Lifesaver details have been conducted in five of the patrol's nine districts resulting in the issuance of 8,012 citations for hazardous and nonhazardous violations. During the six details, 264 drivers have been arrested on DUI charges and 40 pounds of marijuana have been seized.

"If strict enforcement is what t takes to get the fatality count down, we will have fulfilled our mission of protecting life and property, Clark said.

"By the time the Fourth of July is celebrated, a $25 fine will be in effect for persons charged with not wearing a safety belt. Additionally, the Child Restraint Law will apply to children four years of age and under instead of two and under.

"If children aren't properly restrained, drivers could pay a $25 fine. The added penalty should be an incentive for people to buckle up and transport their children in a safetyapproved child restraint device. Practicing these safety mea-sures will save lives," Clark added.

In addition to motorists being greeted by troopers working Lifesaver details, state troopers also will work "Call Back" details during the 78-hour Independence Day weekend.

Ninety troopers, who ordinarily would be off duty, will work an additional 720 hours. Highway Patrol aircraft is scheduled to augment the ground units looking for erratic and/or speeding drivers.

The holiday begins at 6 p.m. on Friday, July 1 and ends midnight Monday, July 4. There were 11 people killed in motor vehicle crashes during the 1993 observance; five on Highway Patrol-governed roads, four on city streets and two on county Troopers arrested 197 drivers under the influence of drugs or alcohol and issued 3,320 other citations during the 78-hour Fourth of July observance in 1993.

Editor's Note: The offices of the Department of Public Safety/Mississippi Highway Patrol will be closed Monday, July 4 and reopen at 8 a.m. on Tuesday, July 5.

Be a 'Holiday Hero,' donate blood

In an effort to maintain an adequate blood supply, the American Red Cross Blood Donor Center, located at the corner of DeBuys Road and 2782 Fernwood Drive in Biloxi, will be open on the Fourth of July between the hours of 7 a.m. and 1 p.m. for what they hope will be many Holiday Heroes.'

A Holiday Hero is someone who pledges to give blood around the holiday period not necessarily on July 4, but on a day near the 4th.

These Holiday Heroes are crucial to maintaining anadequate blood supply during and after a major holiday.

The summer is already a critical time because many blood donors are on vacation. However, blood needs by area hospital patients are ongoing regardless of what time of the year it is or what holiday is coming up.

With visitors flooding the Gulf Coast area for summer vacations, the need for an adequate blood supply becomes even more critical.

A major traffic accident could wipe out our community's blood supply within a matter of Americans going out for steak

steak on the grill, beef is eaten by 66 million Americans every day. The latest market research shows that beef is one of the hottest trends in the food industry.

In casual steakhouses, beef sales are up 19 percent. NPD/ CREST consumer market research indicates that, in any two-week period, 11 million Americans go out for steak. This makes the steakhouse one of the leading properties in the restaurant industry.

In grocery stores, during the fourth quarter of '93, beef's portion of meat case sales increases 2 percent over the year before.

A recent checkoff-funded Retail Tracking Study indicates that beef continues to be the strongest category in the meat department. Beef accounts for almost 60 percent of department dollar sales and more than 50 percent of volume.

Checkoff dollars invested by Hancock County cattle producers are used to fund the 'Beef, It's What's For Dinner' advertising campaign. Explains Mei Mei Newsome, director, Promo-

From a burger at lunch to tions & Information of the Mississippi Cattle Board Industry Board, "The campaign centers around the convenience and versatility of beef, which can be part of a fajita, pasta or even a avorite salad.

Research reveals that consumer intent to purchase beef is up 13 percent since the 'Beef, It's What's For Dinner' campaign began.

The rise in beef consumption can be seen as evidence that our promotional efforts are working and that intent leads to action. says Newsome.

Retail beef sales are expected to continue increasing throughout the summer grilling season. According to Newsome, "While demand for beef is up, there is good news for consumers. An excess supply of beef is expected to bring retail prices down. People will be able to enjoy the great taste of beef, at great savings, all summer long. Producers should be pleased to know that increased demand and lower retail prices will help move the current large supply of fed cattle through the

Why the trend back to beef?. Food experts say people are taking a new view of meal time. Newsome explains, "People are giving up the notion of 'guilt.' We're beginning to see a movement toward the concept of a balanced, moderate diet that includes all foods." Checkoff dollars invested by Hancock County cattle producers fund efforts to make consumers aware of beef's ease and versatility as well as the fact that beef has important nutritional benefits, fits within a healthful diet and is safe and wholesome.

Many checkoff initiatives focus on providing consumers with quick and delicious recipe ideas and beef cooking tips. This summer, nearly 200,000 30 Meals in 30 Minutes recipe books will be distributed by publications, such as Better Homes & Gardens, Cooking Light, Family Circle and Woman's Day. The recipe books are expected to result in 540,000 additional beef meals.

It is said that it was old Ben Franklin himself, that innovator in innovators, who started the tradition of the Fourth of July outdoor celebration in honor of our country's independence; and the Fourth of July picnic feast or barbecue or other outdoor fete continues unabated to this day.

It was a sultry day in Paris, so history tells us. Franklin, at the time was in France representing our country as ambassador to France, and was faced with the task of offering hospitality in his country's name on Independence Day.

He was also faced with the problem that neither his home nor his entertainment budget could possibly accommodate a number of guests at a lavish seated banquet.

So, this ever-resourceful and always thrifty (some would say frugal) Franklin offered to his guests a sort of stand-up, manage-your-own-plate buffet outdoors. The fete was a great

Other hosts soon followed Franklin's lead, and the Fourth of July tradition was born.

The picnic, the barbecue and

"dinner on the grounds" were familiar feasts in early America; the Father of Our Country, George Washington himself, mentioned barbecue feasts in his journals.

These days' barbecue knows no boundaries. We grill indoors and out, every season of the year, and we can argue for hours over the best ways to cook it all, from barbecue sauces or rubs to the best foods to cook, can't we?

We all have our special sauces and special methods. But, we all agree that there's something extra-special about that charbroiled taste of whatever we're cooking.

Whatever you're cooking up, from hot dogs to steaks to pork ribs, you might like to cook up a standby of mine for years, in the oven or on the barbecue pit or grill, Here's:

GIDDY BEANS 2 cans baked pork and beans 1 demi-tasse (or a little less than 2/3 of a coffee cup) of strong black coffee 2 jiggers Bourbon 3 to 4 Tblsp. molasses or dark 4 Tblsp. ketchup Finely chopped onion and garlic to your taste (some like it mild, some strong).

Dashes of Worcestershire sauce

Dash of Tabasco A mere whiff of mixed herbs of your choice

Black pepper to your taste Stir all together well. Taste and add more "jazz" in seasoning if you feel it's needed. Place in bean pot or casserole, bake in 300 degree oven for 45 minutes to an hour, checking from time to time to see if it's ready.

Turn down the oven setting if needed, to keep this dish waiting while the chef finishes his stint at the grill.

I often cook these beans on the barbecue pit, in a heavy iron pot, cooking until a nice crust forms atop. (Copyright, 1994, Katharine

Diamondhead Garden Club

The Diamondhead Garden Club closed its 93/94 season with a field trip and picnic. The club members packed their picnic lunches and went to White Cypress Farm. Before lunch they took a nature trail down to the creek and collected wild flowers for later identification and preservation. After lunch they toured the farm facilities and fields.

White Cypress Farm supplies all of the fresh vegetables that are served at Chappy's Restaurant. Several members enjoyed the fishing from a small dock in the farm pond. Nothing was a keeper" though.

The club announces that Brierley Acker, member and past president, has passed all five required courses and examinaions and is now an accredited flower show judge. She joins fellow member/judges D. Jean Keen and Alice Bramever.

The garden club does not meet in June, July or August, but will resume meetings on the third Wednesday in September at 10:00 a.m. at Diamondhead Community Center.

> Calgon Carbon Corporation, the world's leading manufacturer and marketer of activated carbon, has a current employment opportunity at its plant in Pearlington, MS. The plant has completed three successful years using the self-directed work team concept. We are looking for a person to help us achieve our goal of safely producing high quality activated carbon products to meet or exceed customer needs and requirements.

The following position is available: ELECTRICAL MAINTENANCE COORDINATOR

The successful candidate will co-ordinate a five-member Electrical/ Instrumentation Maintenance Team to support the manufactur-ing process. The incumbent will perform programming, configura-tion and maintenance on the Honeywell, TDC 3000 and Allen-Bradley PLC-5. Also, this individual will assume responsibility for plant switchgear, motor control centers, electrical motors, various instrumentation and other industrial electrical equipment.

A Bachelor's Degree or equiva-lent in Electrical Engineering and 2 to 5 years experience with manufacturing plant electrical systems and instrument control systems is and instituted control systems is required. Experience designing/maintaining automated control systems is highly desirable. Knowledge of and experience in self-directed work teams are a plus, as is the ability to work with minimum supervision.
